- Overall, this class was great. I enjoyed it very much and learned heaps of interesting things.
- Professor Anomaly's knowledge and expertise is clear in his lectures. However, the grading was a little strict.
- Really good course, liked Anomaly a lot. Looking forward to taking more classes with him through the PPE minor in the future.
- This class was very informative, the topics that were selected apply to everyday life.
- This was a great course! I had never taken a small completely seminar-like course before, although I guess this is the standard of Maymester courses, but this class was certainly conducive to provocative discussion. I understood the material significantly and the way it was taught was very interesting and not at all boring or lackluster. The readings were all relevant to the success and learning outcomes of the class, and they weren't too much to manage or handle. I would definitely recommend this course to anyone who might ask what to take for a PH credit class or any interesting class for that matter.
- This was an amazing course that challenged me to think in ways that I do not normally do so. The instructor facilitated discussion extremely effectively in a way that paced the class brilliantly. This was one of the best courses I ever had in my history of education as it nurtured my critical thinking abilities and ways of approaching thought.
- This was an effective Maymester course. By effective I mean that it taught some key ideas of bioethics in a short period of time with a workload that was doable. Instead of the usual "let me fit in as much info as possible" style of teaching, it was more of a "let me focus on the key ideas" style. I learned a lot this way. Instead of focusing on study strategies to remember everything for the exam, I actually just focused on the information and thought critically about it.

- Very intellectually stimulating. I have learned a great deal about how philosophy is structured. I enjoyed the different topics we discussed, all of which were controversial. There were times when Dr. Anomaly talked too fast for me to write sufficient notes but thankfully I have a recorder to fall back on as needed. This was my first philosophy class and maymester experience. I highly enjoyed my time.
- Very interesting topics
- Very thought-provoking
